Correction to race result and retraction of M1x European Best Time

An unexpected network error on Friday, 26 May 2017 affected the timing of Heat 1 of the M1x at 10.30 hrs (Race 8). The regatta start computer is connected to the finish tower through the local network of the regatta venue. The sudden network failure caused a 24-second delay in the start impulse that was not detected immediately in the finish tower, resulting in incorrect times being published and a European Best Time for the Men's Single Sculls being incorrectly attributed to the race winner, Marko Marjanovic of Serbia. The timing team has reviewed the freeze frame images from the start computer to determine the actual start impulse, and has corrected the finish times for this race. The intermediate times that were also incorrect have been deleted, and the European Best Time has been retracted. World Rowing apologises for this error and will take steps to ensure that such an occurrence does not happen in the future.
